DEPARTMENT
The Department of Educational Psychology and Learning Systems invites applications for a tenure-track position within the Department’s Sport Psychology program. The Department aims to advance knowledge in the design, development, evaluation, and delivery of effective learning systems and interventions that enhance the intellectual, emotional, social, and physical growth and performance of individuals throughout the life-span and across cultures. Applicants for this position should have a strong program of research and scholarship in sport, exercise, or performance psychology. For information about the program, see education.fsu.edu/sport-psychology.

RESPONSIBILITIES
The individual hired will be expected to (a) maintain an active research agenda, including the pursuit of appropriate sources of external funding for their work; (b) mentor masters and doctoral students in Sport Psychology, and teach related courses; (c) be involved in curriculum development for the program in Sport Psychology; and (d) contribute to department and university growth, as well as the professional community for Sport Psychology through appropriate service activities.

QUALIFICATIONS
Candidates for this position should have an earned doctorate in sport psychology, related areas of psychology, and/or kinesiology. Stronger candidates will have prior faculty experience in a sport psychology program, including mentoring of doctoral students. Candidates should demonstrate a strong commitment to research/scholarship, teaching, and should show evidence of experience with or willingness to seek external funding for their program of research. The ability to teach motor skill learning, measurement in sport and exercise psychology, cognitive processes in sport psychology, and/or a seminar course in the applicant’s area of expertise is desired.

OTHER INFORMATION
This is a nine-month, tenure-earning position at the assistant/associate professor rank, with possible summer employment. The anticipated start date for this position is August 2018 (beginning of fall semester 2018). Rank and salary will be commensurate with an individual’s experience.

HOW TO APPLY
If qualified and interested in this position, apply to Florida State University at jobs.fsu.edu. Applicants are required to complete FSU’s online application, including all education details and to attach a current vita, letter of application documenting interest and qualifications, and contact information for three references.

Review of applications will begin January 22, 2018 and will continue until the position is filled. Transcripts, work samples, and three letters of recommendation will be required of candidates selected for a campus interview.
